ABSTRACT

In the face of the arrival of refugees in Paraná, there is concern about the scope of public policies established for the integration of this population in the State. In view of this, this work aims to assess whether or not these public policies integrate refugees or not. Such policy was structured in six strategic axes, systematized in actions and goals. To this end, the construction of this investigation started from a quantitative and qualitative approach, through documentary review, based on international, national legislation and documents from official bodies and, also, on the literature review to operationalize and deepen the results. concepts of public policies and social integration, as well as understanding its dimensions and variables. To answer the questioning of the investigation, an analysis of the implementation of public policy and an evaluation between the proposed actions and goals and their execution were carried out. The conclusion of this work points to the success or failure of the integration of refugees in Paraná.
